Nicholas Seet is an expert at navigating the funding process

- When his first startup, Auditude, was funded for $1 million, he quickly left his job at Deloitte Consulting and dove into entrepreneurship.
- In 2005 he won the Rice University Business Plan Competition and received $1.1 million in cash and prizes, over 100 other competitors.
- In 2011 he sold Auditude, to Adobe for a low-9-figure number.
- Auditude grew from a humble MP3 identification company to become the fourth largest ad network in the world.

Seet graduated from Harvey Mudd College (Claremont, CA), with a Bachelor of Science in Engineering and a Bachelor of Arts in Economics, and received his MBA at the UCLA Anderson School of Management, majoring in entrepreneurship and finance.
